A Message from Rev'd Bob

Dear Friends,

As we approach the Festive Season of Advent and Christmas, I realise that my mind always brings me back to certain readings, activities and thoughts, which I might be tempted to admit have become something of a ritual for me. Things that I do every year at this time, and things, which if I don't do them, result in Christmas just not being quite Christmas for me.

For example, if I don't find the time to reread "A Christmas Carol", certain extracts from "A Child's Christmas in Wales", Chapter five of "Wind in the Willows" and of course John 1:1-14, mean that my preparation for Christmas just isn't right! And the shopping, cards and mince pies simply don't matter compared to these 'essentials'.

For those who don't remember it, Chapter 5 of Wind in the Willows tells the story of Mole rediscovering his old home after having left it, without a thought, during the onrush of spring and going off to enjoy many adventures with his newfound, and often more wealthy friends. And Mole's dawning realisation on rediscovering his home on Christmas Eve, that, while it was never going to be the poshest, or the grandest of places, it was his home, he loved it, and above all he always felt safe there. And doesn't everyone, no matter who or what they are, deserve to feel safe and secure in whatever and wherever they are? Because God, Jesus and the Holy Spirit think they should – it's one of the reasons Christmas happened.

And Mole's feelings of safety and security become intensified, when he suddenly hears the carolling mice at his door, singing of the comprehensive and unfettered love that comes into the world on Christmas morning. For they sing: "joy shall be yours in the morning", whoever and wherever you are, and every day, not just on one morning, it shall be Mary's joy too, and animals all, whoever and whatever they are (including all humans of all races) shall receive joy in the morning, simply through the birth of our Lord. And everlasting joy at that.

A Merry Christmas and a Happy New Year to you all!

Bob
