The Museum

Our mission is to perpetuate the stories of all the personnel that served at Snetterton Heath from 1943 to 1945. Without the medics, cooks, clerks and ground personnel, the air crews would not have been able to fly. Every member of the 96th Bomb Group and its sub units had a role that was an integral part of the base.

The museum strives to tell all of their stories through personal accounts, photos, documents and artifacts.

“People will always be remembered as long as we continue to talk about them.”

Testimonial

One of the very few things my dad ever mentioned about the war was Snetterton Heath and I had always wondered about it. My wife and I finally decided to go search for it and were thrilled that we did. We visited the museum and the small team of volunteers' dedication to the museum and love of the men and women of the 96th was wonderful. The museum had such wonderful exhibits and everyone was so helpful and knowledgeable. I enjoyed the visit so much, I went back the next year and am now a member of the 96th BG Association so I can join in exploring the history and honouring the remarkable men and women of the 96th.
