A Message from Fr Paul

With the drawing in of the nights, and the world around us becomes colder, we start to consider the end of the year. In doing so we contemplate the year that has past, the fun times we spent with friends, the moments of sadness as we recall those who we no longer see. This is poignant time of the year for us, where our minds, our prayer, are guided to remembrance. The very first day of November is dedicated to the remembrance of All Saints, when we recall and give thanks to all of the saints that have gone before us. These are not just those well-known saints which are celebrated in the Church throughout the year, but the saints that are not recalled, the saints that have gone unnoticed by the Church, but not by God. I am sure we have all known one of these saints; they are the kind person who always helped mum when you could not be there, those who worked silently and without reward to make our world a better place, those who stood by your side when all others abandoned you, I could go on. These unknown saints who are loved by us and known to God are remembered this day. The very next day is All Souls day, this is the day we remember all those we have once loved but have now lost. None of us are without loss in our lives, our loved ones may have died within these last few months, they may have died many years ago, but that pain of loss never really goes away their memory is always with us. We have this day to remember who they were, but also to pray for them, that they may find a home with God. Finally, we have Remembrace Day itself, when we recall all who gave their lives in war that we may have ours. This day however should not just be a day that we recall those who are lost, but a day when we remember the tragedy of war that we do not make the same mistakes, to do so would devalue those who gave their lives. As the nights draw in, take the time to consider those who were saints to you, those you have once loved but see no longer, and the peace of God that sees the end of conflict.
