MONTHLY MUSING FOR NOVEMBER

This month is about—FLANDERS FIELDS

By

The Late REG NEW

(first published in Below the Pike November 2018)

This year as always, we mark a significant anniversary. At the eleventh hour on the eleventh day of the eleventh month 1918, the guns of World War 1 fell silent as an armistice was signed in a railway compartment in Compiegne, France. In capital cities around the world there was much celebration but not everybody was happy. The American Commander in Chief, General Pershing was furious. He had strongly advised that the war should continue as the German Army would be forced to surrender in a matter of weeks. His comment was "The Germans will not know they were licked". They were prophetic words as, later, Adolf Hitler was to say "The German Army was never defeated in the field. It was stabbed in the back by the German government",

The military casualties in World War 1 were huge. 743,000 British servicemen died and 1.2 million wounded. In World War 2 383,000 died and 376,000 wounded. In wars since, the casualty figures are measured in hundreds, not thousands. That, however, is little consolation for those who lost loved ones. On November 11th we shall remember all those who sacrificed their lives in war. Jesus said "Greater love hath no man than this, that he lay down his life for his friends" British soldiers have done more than this, laying down their lives, not only for their friends but for people whom they did not even know.

On Remembrance Sunday we shall be wearing a poppy, but why a poppy? For this we look to a Canadian soldier named John McCrea. McCrea was a veteran of the Boer War and enlisted in the Canadian army in 1914 as a combatant, although he was a qualified doctor. When this was discovered he was put in charge of a field hospital. During the Second Battle of Ypres in 1915 his best friend Captain Alexis Helmer was killed and it fell to McCrea to conduct his funeral. Immediately afterwards he wrote his most famous poem:

"In Flanders Fields".

"In Flanders fields the poppies blow
Between the crosses, row on row,
That mark our place; and in the sky
The larks, still bravely singing, fly,
Scarce heard amid the guns below.
We are the Dead. Short days ago
We lived, felt dawn, saw sunset glow,
Loved and were loved, and now we lie
In Flanders fields.
Take up our quarrel with the foe;
To you from failing hands we throw
The torch; be yours to hold it high.
If ye break faith with us who die
We shall not sleep though poppies grow
In Flanders fields."

In 1921, inspired by this poem, the Royal British Legion adopted the poppy as the symbol of remembrance.

OUR WEIRD ENGLISH!

- There is no English word that rhymes with 'month'; 'orange'; 'silver'; or 'purple'.
- Dreamt is the only English word that ends in 'mt'.
- The word girl originally meant any young person, not specifically female.
- The word 'facetious' contains all the vowels in the right order!
- Bookkeeper has three consecutive double letters.
- The sentence "The quick brown fox jumps over the lazy dog" uses every letter in the alphabet.

"I have lived a thousand lives.
I have loved a thousand loves.
I've walked on distant worlds
and seen the end of time.
Because I read"
George R. R. Martin, author

BOYAN SLAT, A DUTCH INVENTOR, FOUNDED THE OCEAN CLEANUP TO REMOVE PLASTIC FROM OCEANS AND RIVERS, AIMING TO ELIMINATE 90% OF FLOATING OCEAN PLASTIC BY 2040.

At 16 , while scuba diving in Greece, he noticed more plastic bags than fish, inspiring him to explore solutions for ocean plastic pollution through a high school project. In 2012, he presented his idea at a TEDx talk in Delft, which went viral and enabled him to drop out of his Aerospace Engineering degree at Delft University of Technology to found The Ocean Cleanup in 2013 The organization is headquartered in Rotterdam and employs over 120 professionals from more than 30 countries. Mission and Goals: The Ocean Cleanup is a non-profit organization dedicated to removing plastic from the world's oceans and preventing further pollution from rivers. Its ambitious goal is to remove 90% of floating ocean plastic by 2040 and ultimately put itself out of business once the oceans are clean. The organization addresses both the symptoms and root causes of plastic pollution through two complementary systems: intercepting plastic in rivers and removing accumulated ocean debris

Technologies and Systems: Ocean Systems: Large-scale passive devices, such as System 001, 001B, and System 002, are deployed in plastic-rich ocean zones like the Great Pacific Garbage Patch. These systems move with ocean currents to capture plastic debris efficiently for later removal and recycling System 002, for example, collected 9,000 kilograms of trash in 2021. Interceptors: Solar-powered automated systems deployed in rivers to prevent plastic from reaching the ocean. Interceptors have been installed in countries including Malaysia and Indonesia, targeting the 1,000 rivers responsible for nearly 80% of ocean plastic . In 2022, interceptors collected nearly 840 tonnes of plastic from rivers. Achievements and Challenges :The Ocean Cleanup has faced technical challenges, including initial failures with System 001, which suffered structural damage and limited plastic retention Subsequent redesigns, such as System 001B and System 002, improved efficiency and successfully captured significant amounts of plastic. The organization has raised tens of millions of dollars through crowdfunding and donations from entrepreneurs worldwide, including Marc Benioff of Salesforce Recognition: Boyan Slat has received international recognition for his innovative approach to ocean conservation, including being named a UN Champion of the Earth, appearing on Forbes 30 Under 30, and featuring in Time Magazine's Best Inventions list. He continues to serve as CEO, focusing on strategy, partnerships, and ongoing scientific and technological development

Impact: The Ocean Cleanup's dual approach—removing existing ocean plastic and preventing new pollution from rivers—represents a scalable, technology-driven solution to one of the planet's most pressing environmental challenges. By combining innovation, research, and global collaboration, the organization is making measurable progress toward cleaner oceans and healthier marine ecosystems.

ROUND OUR CHURCHES

HOLY TRINITY HAS HAD MUCH CAUSE FOR CELEBRATION RECENTLY

Joan Dixon, our organist for more than 40 years recently celebrated her 90th birthday with the congregation singing Happy Birthday and making presentations to her—Joan doesn't just play the organ—she's a line dancer, belongs to two walking groups and travels a lot! Superwoman! Pictured above left with her choir and Revd Nicola Gillard and left with chorister Brian.

NOVELS AND RELIGION NO.6: 'LES MISÉRABLES' BY VICTOR HUGO

In this novel, Victor Hugo depicts nineteenth-century France as a merciless society in which many are 'the wretched' ('les misérables'). In such circumstances, many sacrifices are necessary, from painful sacrifices made by parents for the sake of their children to young idealists sacrificing their lives in a political rebellion intended to bring about a fairer and more just society.

However, it is in the figure of the novel's hero, Jean Valjean, particularly that sacrifice gains a religious dimension. Valjean is an ex-convict given shelter by a bishop, from whom he then steals some silver candlesticks. When the authorities capture him, the bishop pretends that he had given him the candlesticks. This act of Christian compassion and forgiveness deeply affects Valjean and he is redeemed and quietly becomes a very religious man. As he earns riches, he gives away much of his money to help the needy; he adopts an orphaned child; and, hounded for much of the novel, he shows love, mercy and forgiveness towards his enemies. Hugo brings out, though, that a life devoted to God is a demanding one, not an easy option. We see Valjean wrestling with crises of conscience in which his duty to God is sharply at odds with his fervent inclinations and feelings, and self-sacrifice is required. If he proves capable of such self-sacrifice, it is because he has before him the example of Christ, whom he describes at one point as 'the real martyr'. Robert Butterworth

On day 1 of my high school history class, our teacher got up and said

"You are 16 years old. 200 years ago people your age were married, planted crops, had children, and built a cabin by winter. You can do your homework. The bar set for you historically is embarrassingly low. You are not dealing with regional famine or plague. You do not have to save your family from marauders or go into battle to destroy your enemies. You have to sit down and learn from someone who cares about you in a safe, air-conditioned room. You have no excuses."

IT'S CALLED THE LONG GOODBYE.

Every time I saw my Mum over a decade, a little part of her died. Please share these wonderful guidelines as more and more people are suffering from this disease - both the individual and the families

1a. Every time you enter the room announce yourself. "Hi- it's……" NEVER ask- Do you know who I am??? That causes anxiety.

"1. If I get dementia, I want my friends and family to embrace my reality.

2. If I think my spouse is still alive, or if I think we're visiting my parents for dinner, let me believe those things. I'll be much happier for it.

3. If I get dementia, don't argue with me about what is true for me versus what is true for you.

4. If I get dementia, and I am not sure who you are, do not take it personally. My timeline is confusing to me.

5. If I get dementia, and can no longer use utensils, do not start feeding me. Instead, switch me to a finger-food diet, and see if I can still feed myself.

6. If I get dementia, and I am sad or anxious, hold my hand and listen. Do not tell me that my feelings are unfounded.

7. If I get dementia, I don't want to be treated like a child. Talk to me like the adult that I am.

8. If I get dementia, I still want to enjoy the things that I've always enjoyed. Help me find a way to exercise, read, and visit with friends.

9. If I get dementia, ask me to tell you a story from my past.

10. If I get dementia, and I become agitated, take the time to figure out what is bothering me.

11. If I get dementia, treat me the way that you would want to be treated.

12. If I get dementia, make sure that there are plenty of snacks for me in the house. Even now if I don't eat, I get angry, and if I have dementia, I may have trouble explaining what I need."
